Upwelling on east side of basin induced deposition of organic-rich potential source rock. Reef develops on shelf edge during a pause in siliciclastic flux from land with drier climate there.

Weaker winds cause little upwelling.

In slightly more oxygenated ocean, organic-rich sediments are not deposited up toe of slope.